ELDERLY HOUSING SITES ARE APPROVED

Speedsters Of Coach Ty Holland Rack Up Victory

The speed merchants of Coach Ty Holland, aided by superb blocking, ran up a 38 to 0 score last night over the Panthers of Russellville. The Panthers, with a strong offense and tricky aerial attack, threatened to crack the Murray defense at times, but failed to push over a score.

With star halfback Tommy Wells sidelined with a bruised knee, Coach Ty Holland turned to his other speedsters Don Faughn, Ronnie Edwards, Don Lee and Donnie Danner and the bruising attack of fullback Ben Hogancamp. Hogancamp turned in a yeoman's work last night carrying the ball, throwing key blocks and crashing through for extra points.

As Russellville received the ball on opening kickoff they seemed to be able to move the ball well behind the running of Head, Todd and Carter, making gains on every play. The Panthers marked up four first downs in short order, moving the ball down into Tiger territory. The Tigers were penalized half the distance to the goal line which put the ball on the 15 yard line. With 5:07 left in the quarter Russellville fumbled the ball on the goal line to set the stage for the first Murray score.

Moving the ball to the 20 to begin the Murray attack, a three yard gain was accomplished. Faughn took the ball on the second play and galloped 77 yards for the Murray score. Hogancamp ran over the extra point.

As the Panthers received the ball they found a tightfisted Murray defense and made no gain. Kicking off to Murray the ball was downed on the 26 yard line. Ronnie Edwards moved to left the ball to the 33 yard line, then on the next play hauled it to the 42. Faughn carried the ball on the next play going all the way, 58 yards, for the TD with only 11 seconds in the quarter.

Hogancamp made the extra point good by running.

In the second quarter the Panthers set up the third Murray score when they faked on a fourth down kick and tried to run.

Advertising Salesmanship Great Need

HILTON HEAD, S. C. (UPI) — J. Warren McClure, president of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association, NAAEA, said today that unless advertising and salesmanship are stepped up according to their true importance, U. S. productivity and employment will fail to keep pace with the population during the next decade.

"The answer to increased consumer demand will rest in the future," with American industry producing more and better things at lower prices — and backing them with mass salesmanship — advertising — and good old-fashioned American salesmanship to stimulate the consumer's desire to buy," he told a meeting of the NAAEA of the Carolinas.

He said that tax cuts alone will never stimulate consumer demand. "We've seen savings accounts soar, while the business barometer dipped," McClure said. McClure is publisher of the Burlington Vt. Free Press.

He said the stimulation of consumer desires must be done in an atmosphere of business confidence. "That's something the arm chair economists in Washington and the detractors of Madison Avenue and salesmanship seem to casually ignore," the publisher said.

He said American salesmanship and the future of its economy and politics are directly linked. "There is no longer time to wait for a better appreciation and understanding from Washington of what good salesmanship and advertising mean to this country — at home and abroad. Time is running out," he said.

He suggested that President Kennedy do three things to improve America's image abroad. First, McClure said, "select several of America's greatest salesmen and then give them the toughest selling job we have overseas." Second, set up a sales training course to train key personnel in the State Department and our overseas staffs on the psychology and techniques of selling. "They have to sell ideas, the toughest things to sell in the world," he said. Thirdly, he suggested that Kennedy appoint his university professors and theoretical advisers with a set of top U. S. sales executives who have proven their ability to handle international selling problems.

"No sales campaign is worth its salt without practical, obtainable objectives," McClure said.

The latter part of the second quarter showed a determined Panther team trying desperately for a score. A withering aerial attack was tried by Russellville with some of the passes connecting.

The Tigers, remembering the best defense against a pass is to rush the passer, red dogged the passer relentlessly and the half ended with considerable yardage lost by passing attempts on the part of Russellville.

As the second half opened, Murray received the ball on their own 38 yard line. Faughn, Hogancamp and Edwards moved the ball steadily down the field to the 17 yard line where Edwards went over for the TD. Hogancamp made the extra point running it over with 8:01 left in the quarter.

Coach Holland began to substitute freely in the second half as the Tigers held a 28 to 0 margin over their opponents.

Don Lee intercepted a pass in the third quarter on his own 30 and moved it past the mid stripe. Russellville 33 and Edwards went over for the TD. Hogancamp made the extra point running it over with 8:01 left in the quarter.

Early in the fourth quarter Danny Nix got the ball from the Panther ball carrier deep in Russellville territory, but Murray lost the ball to the Panthers on downs.

With five minutes left in the game Russellville again seemed to be able to move the ball down the field, but with 4:58 left Donnie Danner moved it to the left side of the field he met the whole Panther squad, so he reversed his field, streaking clear to the right side of the field and ran over the final Murray tally. Barber made the extra point good.

Murray's blocking last night was the best of the season, with key blocks being made at the right time for the ball carrier. The Murray defense gave some on yardage, but contained the Panthers to blank them for the night.

Tommy Wells is expected to be in condition for the game next week against Morganfield.

MAYFIELD LOSES

Mayfield lost the second game in a row last night as powerful Caldwell County put across a 12 to 0 win. Scores came in the first and second quarters with Gianinni and McAllister carrying the ball. Last week Fulton downed the Cardinals 6 to 0.

Band Performs At Halftime

The Murray High Band put on an "outstanding performance last night at the Murray High-Russellville game to perform for the first time before a home audience.

The band was dressed out in the new uniforms with all band members wearing white shoes.

Leaving from the end of the field in perfect formation the band marched up the field at halftime playing Dixie.

They executed a precision drill to Iowa State Band Law and did a snappy dance step to the tune of Tea for Two.

Another precision drill was done to the Orange Bowl March and as they left the field another rendition of Dixie was given.

The band received a resounding ovation from the stands.

The band was rained out for the Trigg County game, and although they made the trip, it did not get to perform at halftime.

The weather and field was perfect last night and the anxious to please band members, 85 strong, put on an outstanding show.

The band is under the direction of Phil Shelton with Eddie Lee Grogan as the Drum Major. Steve Titworth is president of the band.

Miss America To Be Named Tonight

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI) — The nation heralds a new Miss America, a queen of beauty, talent and poise, tonight, at all hours, the witching hour.

Who will succeed North Carolina's Maria Beale Fletcher, Miss America 1962, as the 36th wearer of the crown was anybody's guess as the contest turned to its last night of judging.

But seven misses from the Midwest, South, and Far, Far West had running starts toward becoming one of the 40 finalists named as the televised program gets started tonight, 9:30 p. m. (EDT), on CBS-TV. All seven have won preliminary judging trophies in the swimsuit and talent competitions among the 54 contestants from every state, Chicago, New York City, Washington, D. C., and Canada.

Added to the elite circle of preliminary winners Friday night were Miss Wisconsin Joan Mary Engh, 21, who walked away with the swimsuit honors in her white, sequin-dotted suit, and an unusual double selection in the talent category, Miss Maryland Beverly Ann Smith and Miss Nebraska Mary Lee Jensen.

Although those three, and the four earlier talent and swimsuit winners on Wednesday and Thursday nights, have good chances of becoming finalists, none is guaranteed one of the select spots.

All 10 finalists will again go through each of the three judging categories tonight for the television audience. Then the field will be cut to five misses.

Each will answer a question for the judges, and then, just as the clock moves up to midnight, one will be crowned Miss America 1963. With the title goes a scholarship and a year-long parade of personal appearances, which could add up to about $75,000 for the winner.

Soblen Begins To Come Out Of Coma

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet spy Dr. Robert A. Soblen has begun to emerge from the deep coma in which he has lain for two days and his condition is improving, attending doctors announced today.

A hospital bulletin issued at 10:45 a. m. 5:45 a. m. (EDT) said Soblen remained unconscious after an overdose of drugs, but "the depth of coma is becoming less."

Dr. C. G. Barnes, consultant physician in charge, said the 61-year-old fugitive spy "has shown signs of improvement and we are hopeful that he will regain consciousness."

At the time the announcement was made, Soblen had been unconscious for more than 48 hours from a self-administered heavy dose of barbiturates.

Soblen's wife, Dr. Dina Soblen, was at his bedside when the announcement was made. She flew here secretly from New York Friday.

There still was no indication of when Soblen might be recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital.

The former New York psychiatrist faces deportation and life imprisonment in the United States for spying for the Soviet Union.

Soblen, his heart weakened by a battle against blood cancer and the overdose of drugs, had hovered near death for some time since he took the drugs Thursday just before he was to be deported.

30 Units Approved For Murray; To Be Built Near Other Units

The city council last night approved the sites for elderly housing construction in Murray, as presented by L. D. Miller, executive director of the Murray Housing Commission.

The elderly housing units will contain certain features not found in normal homes. All doors are three feet wide, ramps are used instead of steps, signal switches are located near the baseboards in case a person falls and cannot rise and needs help, and special features are included in the bathrooms to aid the elderly in bathing safely.

The colored units are to be constructed at Pine and Second streets.

These two sites have been tentatively approved by the Atlanta office of the Federal Housing Agency.

The elderly housing units will contain certain features not found in normal homes. All doors are three feet wide, ramps are used instead of steps, signal switches are located near the baseboards in case a person falls and cannot rise and needs help, and special features are included in the bathrooms to aid the elderly in bathing safely.

The city already has under construction low rental housing units which are well on the way toward completion.

In other action the council approved a work detail from the city force to help work on the Murray-Calloway County Airport Monday with a county force.

Investigation was authorized of a company which plans to move into Murray to sell a TV service. The service involves running lines over the town and they will be run into the homes of those who purchase the service. Channels now obtainable will be available from the service, however good reception is promised without the aid of a regular antenna.

A new traffic light will be installed at Five Points to better control the traffic.

Councilman Preston Ordway announced that blacktopping has begun on North 15th street and that barring bad weather, it should be completed in two or three days. The council approved the widening of South 13th street from the W. Z. Carter School line to Poplar street. The street was widened this week, six feet on each side, for the width of the school. The widening project will provide greater parking space for school patrons and also provide walking space for children who attend the school. The school does not have a sidewalk extending along the street in front of it.

Poplar street will also be repaved from Seyenth to Ninth streets.

Councilman Charles Baker announced that new parking meters will be installed. About 126 of the oldest meters have been traded in for the new meters.

Jack Bryan, Superintendent of the Murray Natural Gas System was authorized to attend the American Gas Association Convention in New Jersey October 7 for four days.

New street lights will be added to Elm between Sixth and Seventh, on Wells Blvd. between 14th and 15th, on Hamilton between Broach and North 11th, and on Olive street where 11th would intersect.

Councilman Roy Starks reported that the reason for more smoke than usual at the city land fill site where garbage is buried, is that a large quantity of limbs and old shrubbery is being burned. No garbage is being burned. The city truck picks up items in the residential areas on Wednesday and Thursday of each week and a large number of tree limbs, shrubbery trimmings, etc. have been picked up which cannot be buried with the regular garbage. They have been burned and more smoke is the result.

The first reading was given to an ordinance of annexation to the city. The area involved is mostly to the north and south of the city, with little added on the east and west.

First Snow Storm Lashes The Rockies

The first general snow storm of the season lashed at Rocky Mountain states today. In the South, a cloudburst triggered flash-flooding in Texas, forcing many Fort Worth residents from their homes.

Snow fell throughout western and central Montana and a cold wave dropped temperatures 40 to 50 degrees in 24 hours. The mercury plunged from 85 degrees at Helena, Mont., Thursday to 53 on Friday.

In Colorado the snow forced the closing of America's highest automobile road which leads to the top of Mt. Evans. The Colorado Highway Department said the road would not open again until next summer.

Locally heavy snow was expected in the higher elevations in Wyoming today.

The Texas cloudburst caused one death when a car and truck collided during blinding rain. Approximately 570 families abandoned homes in and about Fort Worth when rains of nearly seven inches Friday night caused flooding.

Rising water blocked many highways as Texas experienced its third straight day of torrential rain following a summer drought.

The edge of the cold air mass bringing the Rocky Mountain snows, was expected to reach as far as Michigan and Kansas today, bringing some showers and thunderstorms.

Added to the elite circle of preliminary winners Friday night were Miss Wisconsin Joan Mary Engh, 21, who walked away with the swimsuit honors in her white, sequin-dotted suit, and an unusual double selection in the talent category, Miss Maryland Beverly Ann Smith and Miss Nebraska Mary Lee Jensen.

LAST CHANCE VALLEY BY WILLIAM HEUMAN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED? After eleven days of mounting dread, Thorpe McAfee was released to the prospect of dying. He and Jim Varney had been double-crossed by Ben Lacey and Jope Hoagland, their partners in a gold-claim in the foothills of the Pottersville Range. The latter had gone off with accumulated gold dust and money. Thorpe and Jim, forced to try to get a settlement, ran out of water in a Death Valley and, crying and collapsed.

When Thorpe's feverish eyes fell upon a beautiful girl offering water from a canteen, he could only think that she was a mirage. But the water was real, and Thorpe and Jim were taken to a small, ramshackle house. The owner, a girl named Fern O'Hara, whose father had staked a bonanza claim nearby, was determined to work the mine deep beneath the drive her out.

Blindfolded and tied to a post next day, Thorpe and Varney learned their two faithless partners were now the new owners of the prosperous Birdcage Saloon and Gambling House.

Impelled by even the score, they went to the Birdcage and, drawing fairly gunned down the two deserters. After hearing the Birdcage owner, Ed Barnes, told them that they'd lost likely, Thorpe and Varney, realizing Thorpe's preference of a bonanza business to running a saloon, offered to buy out Thorpe's share of the Birdcage. This portended a clash with Neil Farrington, owner of a flourishing brothel refinery. All the brothel procurers, Thorpe bought up have been forced out of business.

CHAPTER 11
IT WAS about ten o'clock in the evening, and Thorpe McAfee had played a half-dozen hands, winning a few small pots, when the red-whiskered man pushed through the door, his face somewhat flushed with drink, and a gleam in his eyes as he strode toward the bar.

He weighed over two hundred and thirty pounds, was at least six feet three inches tall, with a comparatively small head for his body. He had huge shoulders, a thick waist and heavy legs.

One of the players at Thorpe's table said in a low voice, "Con Baumholtz is back. Thought he was up Birdcage way."

Thorpe glanced at the big man at the bar, then forgot about him until Jim Varney stepped up to his shoulders and said in a low voice, "That big horse at the bar, Thorpe, is looking to make trouble."

Thorpe smiled and said, "I can throw him out. The Birdcage is still partly owned by me."

"I'd be willing to take care of him myself," Varney said, "but not with fists, of course. It seems, though, he has a quarrel with you."

Thorpe raised his eyebrows. "With me?" he repeated.

"Claims you shot up his friend, Jope Hoagland," Varney said, "which is a lot of nonsense. We both know Hoagland wasn't the kind of a fellow about making friends. There's nobody in this town gives a hoot that he's dead."

Thorpe scowled. "You think somebody's setting the Baumholtz on me?" he asked.

Varney nodded. "It looks that way to me," he said. "I could get him out of the place, but that wouldn't solve anything."

Thorpe shook his head. "It wouldn't," he agreed. He sat at the table for a moment, looking at the cards in his hand, remembering that he'd done a lot of investigating that day. He'd asked questions about Death Valley, about pork, and about the word had spread through town that he now was interested in nailing. Possibly someone was using Con Baumholtz to discourage him.

Baumholtz stood at the bar, his back toward Thorpe, and Thorpe could hear him speaking to one of the bartenders.

"He's a big one," Varney said worriedly. "I wouldn't want to tackle him. Why not let me put a gun in his back and order him out?"

"Let it go," Thorpe said, and continued playing at the card table.

After a while Baumholtz left the bar and took a seat at one of the card tables quite close to where Thorpe was sitting. He pulled his way into the game, uninvited, and no one had the courage to ask him to stay out with him.

Sitting with his back toward the man, Thorpe heard him call for whiskey. When the waiter came with it on a tray, the big fellow spat it out on the floor and scowled. "Rat-gut! When my friend Hoagland was here, he didn't set out this kind of wolf bait for a man."

It was Thorpe's turn to deal, and he shuffled the cards mechanically and dealt them out to the three men playing with him. None of them said anything, knowing that Baumholtz was pushing for a fight.

Con Baumholtz said in a loud voice, "Place is run down since they murdered my friend, Hoagland."

Thorpe dealt the last card, then turned his head to look straight at the big, red-whiskered man. The big fellow had greenish eyes, a fuzz of reddish hair to go with the red whiskers, and he wore a dirty gray, sweat-stained flannel shirt, along with a bullwhacker's high boots.

Thorpe looked at him calmly and coolly, then turned back to his card game. He definitely heard the man at his left swallow a lump in his throat.

Apparently thinking that Thorpe had looked him over and decided that he was too tough, Baumholtz became even more arrogant. He said loudly, "They ought to hang a man shoots somebody in the belly who ain't even armed. Man did that to lower than a dog."

This was as far as Thorpe could let it go. He looked at the cards in his hand, and then he slid them together face down on the table and started to pick up his chips. He said, "Gentlemen, I'm out."

He walked on toward the bar, passing within a few feet of Baumholtz, and cashed in his chips with one of the bartenders. As he was picking up an empty liquor bottle on the bar nearby, Varney was watching him worriedly as Jim spoke to a customer at the other end of the bar.

Thorpe picked up the bottle, holding it by the neck, and then he walked without haste mentally destructive to the national fiber. To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. Work must be found for able-bodied but destitute workers. The Federal Government must and shall quit this business of relief."

F. D. R.'s hope and prediction has not come true. Instead, this business of relief has neared the status of a national scandal, according to a large number of people in possession of the facts, many of whom are officially connected with so-called relief work.

Numerous cases have been cited of people who get more money on relief than they would in a pay envelope after deductions of income and social security taxes. After a while these people lose all will and capacity for work. With millions of government checks going out each month, the relief programs have gathered tremendous vote-getting appeal, hence making it most difficult to obtain sufficient political support to improve welfare programs, which would reduce costs and increase morale.

From Hollywood comes the report of a child actor who turned down a job paying $28 a day because he was accustomed to $100 a day. He was awarded unemployment benefits. In New York, a ring of six persons was uncovered which allegedly had bilked the public of $41,900 in unemployment compensation by faking employment records. A New Jersey legislative committee discovered a family with 23 children (not welfare payments. Other instances were reported in which two, three and four generations of families were on public assistance.

Farm Bureau does not regret or oppose the expenditure of one dollar of the $4 billion per year for public assistance so long as it is honestly and legally spent. It is natural that complaints such as outlined herein should strike a responsive chord. Working people, having to pay more taxes, justly gripe over abuses they observe. Loose administration of welfare not only wastes money; it undermines availability of men for work, and the morale of workers who foot the bill.

WOULD BAN STRIPPERS

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Television viewers will see Dick Powell, vintage 1937, next Fall when he dons a uniform and sings an "Anchors Aweigh" type song for the first time in years.

And, even with a case of laryngitis, he sounds better than many of today's vocalists.

During Powell's early Hollywood career, Powell sang in uniform so often that he risked not being recognized wearing civvies.

The last time Powell sang was in 1961, but that was for a recording session, nothing like the marching musicals which featured him wearing Army, Navy and Marine uniforms before World War II.

Powell's latest service stint was for a part in "Ensign O'Toole", the new series being filmed by his Four Star Television.

He played a Navy Chief Petty Officer named "Powell, Richard E" who auditions for a service-men's show.

Before filming his scene, Powell complained about laryngitis and an assistant director was sent for cough drops.

"I thought of bringing one of my old records to take the place of my voice," he said, "But the record was made with a band and we're just using a piano for this number."

After trying to sing the cobwebs out of his throat, Powell reported for work. He was ready, but his voice seemed reluctant.

However, once cameras started rolling and a pianist played "The Song of the Marines" from Powell's 1937 movie "The Singing Marine," Powell came back like an old firehorse.

Standing in a beribboned uniform, he struck up a rousing rendition of his old "Marines" hit, singing "We're Showing 'Em Off" and bidding farewell to "Sally and Sue."

It had been 25 years since Powell sang that song in a picture and neither time nor laryngitis marred his return to uniform.

When he finished singing, he received a round of applause from other actors, directors, technicians and visitors who dropped by for the event.

The privilege of singing the old tune cost Powell's firm $50, paid to Warner Bros. studio, which owns "Marines."

SAVES ON PENNIES

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The government is planning to economize on its minting of pennies. President Kennedy signed a bill Wednesday allowing the government to stop using $1.16 a pound tin in pennies and switch to zinc, which costs about 12 cents a pound.

AA GROUP EXPANDS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Alcoholics Anonymous announced Monday its latest count of active groups was 9,305, double the total of 10 years ago.

No. 1 Sophia Loren: "... what must be the most beautiful eyes in the world."

No. 2 Brigitte Bardot: "First, you see her arresting chin... then the rest of her face..."

No. 3 Grace Kelly: "If ever a woman has more perfect ears, we've yet to meet her."

No. 4 Jacqueline Kennedy: "Her magnificent head of hair frames a magnificent face."

No. 5 Audrey Hepburn: "Her neck is so fragile, so lovely."

No. 6 Julia Mander: "Here is a perfectly shaped, delicate nose."

No. 7 Shirley MacLaine: "Her lips are the most inviting any artist could ever recall..."

No. 8 Kim Novak: "She has perfect cheekbone structure."

No. 9 Princess Margaret: "She has a classically beautiful forehead... a most beautiful face."

No. 10 Doris Day: "Whoever said freckles detract from beauty didn't see Doris."

SOPHIA LOREN is the most beautiful woman in the world, says the Caricaturists Society of America, offering these "with suitable commentary, as the 10 tops. A woman's beauty 'has to be in her face, rather than in her legs or arms... or any other part of her figure,' says Joseph Kaliff, president of the society. They admit a figure helps.

Fashionettes

United Press International

The higher the hose, the smarter the leg, according to college fashion primers. One sock maker has introduced the above-the-knee sock that snugly anchors itself at mid-thigh with an elasticized garter top. Alternating link-and-link cable motifs with a skinny rib, the long socks go well with short, short skirts or bermudas.

The chantilly lace mantilla's headed for church, parties and theaters. The mantillas also are used as a neckline fill-up. Black, white and bisque are favored tones.

Dangling medallions, worn around the leg at the top of knee-or baby socks, go back to school. They dangle from a colorful adjustable fabric garter. The garters invented by Joseph Tendler and Ted Noble, of New Haven, Conn., help girls to communicate about their love life. Worn on the left leg, the garter means the girl is going steady; right leg, unattached.

Just what sporty types ordered for wearing in college dormitories: knicker pajamas. The loose-fitting, long-sleeve tops and knickers in one collection were edged in lace. For the dormitory wit: jester pajamas in red flannel. The loose overalls ends in a series of deep points.
